

A striking new art display will warn the public about the dangers of military land

The giant silhouettes of soldiers have been used to create a new public art installation in Wiltshire to inform and educate the public about the dangers of accessing military land.