

AI-enabled data rescue from historic charts

The Environment Agency has around 10,000 years' worth of hydrological data on river levels and flows – but it is stored on materials that are fast degrading.