BEIRUT: A Palestinian joint security force on Friday took control of a school complex in Lebanon’s largest Palestinian refugee camp after gunmen who had occupied the site since late July withdrew.

The deployment was part of the second phase of a cease-fire agreement between the Fatah movement and extremist groups in mid-September.

Clashes between the rival Lebanese factions in late July left more than 30 people dead.

The force entered the UNRWA school complex, which became a battleground between the rival groups, as gunmen vacated the site.
