EU-U.S. Trade Talks: European Commission presents draft negotiating mandates

The European Commission has today adopted proposals for negotiating directives for trade talks with the United States: one on conformity assessment to make it easier for companies to prove their products meet technical requirements on both sides of the Atlantic, and one on the elimination of tariffs for industrial goods. The Member States must now give their green light to the proposals before negotiations can begin. Commissioner for Trade Cecilia Malmström said: “Today’s publication of our draft negotiating directives is part of the implementation of the July Joint Statement of Presidents Juncker and Trump. Ambassador Lighthizer and I have already met several times in the Executive Working Group and I have made it very clear that the EU is committed to upholding its side of the agreement reached by the two Presidents. These two proposed negotiating directives will enable the Commission to work on removing tariffs and non-tariff barriers to transatlantic trade in industrial goods, key goals of the July Joint Statement.” As part of its commitment to transparency, the European Commission has published the drafts mandates at the same time as submitting them to the EU Member States. The negotiating directives submitted by the Commission to the Council implement the 25 July Joint Statement and cover two potential agreements with the U.S.. State aid: Commission clears Italian liquidity support guarantee for Banca Carige

The European Commission has found Italian plans to support the access to liquidity of Cassa di Risparmio di Genova e Imperia ("Banca Carige") with a state guarantee to be in line with EU State aid rules. In particular, the State aid consists of the Italian State providing a guarantee for a series of bonds that the bank plans to issue. These bonds will have a total nominal amount of up to €3 billion. Banca Carige will pay a fee to the Italian State for the guarantee. The Commission's assessment showed that the measure is targeted, proportionate and limited in time and scope. The Commission has therefore concluded that this liquidity support is in line with EU rules, in particular its 2013 Banking Communication. More information will be on the Commission's competition website, in the public case register under the case numbers SA.52917. Mergers: Commission approves BASF's acquisition of Solvay's nylon business, subject to conditions

The European Commission has approved, under the EU Merger Regulation, the proposed acquisition of Solvay's nylon business by BASF. Today's decision follows an in-depth review of the proposed transaction, which involves Solvay and BASF, which both manufacture nylon compounds and nylon fibres. Nylon fibres are used in particular for clothing and sportswear. The manufacture of nylon compounds and nylon fibres requires as a key input Adiponitrile ("ADN"), an oil derivative. BASF and Solvay have dominant or strong market positions throughout the nylon value chain, and in particular the value chain of a type of nylon called "nylon 6.6". Following its in-depth market investigation, the Commission identified the following competition concerns with the transaction as originally notified: (i) it would lead to a reduction of the number of suitable suppliers and likely price increases in a number of markets related to the nylon industry in the European Economic Area (EEA); (ii) due to the limited number of suppliers of intermediate products, the merged entity would also have the ability and incentive to restrict its competitors' access to essential inputs including ADN, nylon 6.6 and others in the EEA. To address the Commission's competition concerns, BASF and Solvay offered the following commitments: (a) the divestiture of Solvay's facilities at Belle-Etoile and Valence (France), Gorzow (Poland), and Blanes (Spain) to a single suitable buyer; (b) the creation of a production joint venture in Chalampé (France) between the merged entity and the buyer of the divested assets, for the production of adipic acid; (c) long-term supply agreements for ADN to meet the divestment business' requirements. The commitments fully remove the overlap between BASF and Solvay in the markets where the Commission had identified competition concerns. Therefore, the Commission concluded that the proposed transaction, as modified by the commitments, would no longer raise competition concerns. The decision is conditional upon full compliance with the commitments. Commissioner Margrethe Vestager, in charge of competition policy, said: "Nylon is used in many different types of products, not only textile or carpets but also in car components, to make them lighter and more environmentally friendly. Our decision will allow for the creation of a significant European player in this market because the commitments offered by BASF and Solvay ensure that the merger will not lead to higher prices or less choice for European businesses and, ultimately, consumers." The full press release is available online in EN, FR, DE, NL. Mergers: Commission clears creation of joint venture between Mitsubishi UFJ Financial Group and Akamai

The European Commission has approved, under the EU Merger regulation, the acquisition of joint control over a newly created joint venture in Japan by Mitsubishi UFJ Financial Group, Inc. ("MUFG HD") of Japan and Akamai Technologies, Inc. ("Akamai") of the US. The joint venture will provide a blockchain-based online payment network in Japan. MUFG HD is a holding company for entities engaged in a wide range of financial businesses. Akamai is a company that provides cloud services for delivering, optimising and securing content and business applications over the Internet. The Commission concluded that the proposed transaction would raise no competition concerns because the joint venture has no current or planned activities in the European Economic Area. The transaction was examined under the simplified merger review procedure. More information is available on the Commission's competition website, in the public case register under the case number M.9214. The meeting will take place with the participation of Vice-President responsible for the Energy Union Maroš Šefčovič, Foreign Minister Pavlo Klimkin and Mr Andriy Kobolyev, CEO of Naftogaz on the Ukrainian side and Energy Minister Alexander Novak and Mr Alexander Medvedev, Deputy Chairman of Gazprom on the Russian side. Vice-President Maroš Šefčovič said: *"I welcome very much that both sides have agreed to come to Brussels for the second round of negotiations at ministerial level. I welcome also the presence of top representatives of the two incumbent gas companies. Exactly six months have passed since we met in this format for the first time in Berlin. Free and fair elections: Commissioner Jourová opens the first meeting of the European cooperation network on elections

On Monday 21 January, Commissioner Jourová will open the first European elections network meeting. This is one of the concrete actions to secure free and fair European elections proposed by President Juncker in his 2018 State of the Union address. Scandals, such as the Facebook/ Cambridge Analytica case, have shown that elections might be influenced by the misuse of personal data during political campaigns. Commissioner for Justice, Consumers and Gender Equality, Věra Jourová said: "I want Europeans to be able to make a free decision when casting their vote in May. The threats to elections are now online, national authorities have to be equipped to guarantee fair and secure elections for all citizens. The European elections network will be the place to share intelligence on how to protect the electoral processes." The European cooperation network will enable authorities to quickly detect potential threats to electoral processes, establish a swift and well-coordinated response to such threats, and encourage common projects and exercises among national networks. The network also supports cooperation with other European level groups and bodies. Member States have appointed a contact point for the European-level cooperation network. While the first focus of the European network will be the upcoming 2019 European elections in May, its broader objective is to support the integrity of all national, regional and local elections in the EU. Up to four meetings will be held in 2019, followed by semi-annual meetings from 2020 onwards. The agenda of the meeting and more details about the European elections network can be found online.
