

Corporate taxes: less could be more – study says

Corporate taxes could be the most harmful form of taxation to economic growth. Contrary to public perception, there has been no reduction in corporate tax revenues in relation to GDP in the last 40 years. Countries that have reduced their corporate tax rates in recent years have seen increases in investment in the following years. There is no race to the bottom, rather to a middle range of some 20% corporate tax rate and revenues are stable or even increasing. These are some of the conclusions of a recent study commissioned by the European Economic and Social Committee (EESC) at the request of the Employers' Group.

The study was presented on 5 July at the seminar entitled "The impact of corporate taxes on the European economy". According to the researchers, a high corporate tax rate can hamper business activity by making some investment projects unprofitable. This reduces the tax base and, consequently, revenue collection from corporate taxes. Senior representatives from the EU Commission and the OECD participated in the seminar, including Valère Moutarlier, Director of Direct taxation, Tax coordination, Economic analysis and Evaluation at DG TAXUD; or David Bradbury, Head of the Tax Policy and Statistics Division of the Centre for Tax Policy and Administration of the OECD.

A lower corporate tax rate would on the other hand increase investments undertaken by both domestic and foreign investors (FDI). When investments increase, employment increase and more taxes will also be collected on incomes and consumption.

The report presents estimates of concrete tax changes undertaken during the years 1981-2014. In the case of six countries, reductions in corporate tax rates led to an increase in revenues. Lower corporate taxes means more growth – cutting the tax rate by 10 percentage points can raise annual growth by 1-2 percentage points.

The study aims to present facts and figures and to serve as a useful and reliable tool in the discussion on taxation. This is especially important in the current situation in the European Union, where public perception of the taxation of companies (especially large multinationals) is distorted and exploited in media by populists, stated Krister Andersson, Vice-President of the Employers' Group. The study provides data and concrete examples to counter-act this narrative.

It is often claimed that if only companies paid their fair share of taxes, spending on education, infrastructure and social programs could be ensured. However, the OECD and the EU Commission has concluded that improper base erosion and profit shifting by multinationals amounted to some 0.3% of GDP before any counter measures were taken. That is a very small fraction of the overall public spending in the Member States.

That is why it is crucial that the tax system promotes growth and trade. Only then can public programs be properly financed. The EU Member States have passed extensive legislation in the last years to create a level playing field and to ensure that the tax systems protect the collection of revenues. The European economy needs to strengthen its competitiveness.

de cofinancer ses investissements en innovation et en croissance dans les années à venir. La société est responsable du développement de «OXE-Diesel», une nouvelle génération de moteurs hors-bord diesel pour bateaux, conçus pour remplacer les moteurs à essence à 2 et 4 temps actuels. En remplaçant ces moteurs très polluants, le dioxyde de carbone est réduit de plus de 35%, le monoxyde de carbone de plus de 99% et les hydrocarbures et les oxydes d'azote de plus de 68%. Le financement est soutenu par le Fonds européen pour les investissements stratégiques (EFSI), au cœur du plan Juncker. Le projet de moteur hors-bord de Cimco réduira considérablement les émissions, tout en permettant aux garde-côtes et à la police de sauvetage de poursuivre leurs actions en mer. »Un communiqué de presse est disponible ici. En juin 2019, le plan Juncker avait mobilisé près de 410 milliards d'euros d'investissements supplémentaires, dont 12,8 milliards d'euros en Suède. Mergers: Commission approves the acquisition of Flybe by Connect Airways, subject to conditions

The European Commission has approved, under the EU Merger Regulation, the acquisition of UK regional air carrier Flybe by Connect Airways, a consortium by Virgin Atlantic, Stobart Aviation and Cyrus. Through the consortium, the three companies will jointly control Flybe, Propius and Stobart Air following the merger. The Commission investigated the impact of the proposed transaction on the market for air transport of passengers on routes from British airports to other European airports as well as some intra-UK routes. The Commission's investigation found that the transaction, as initially notified, would have led to quasi-monopolies on two direct European routes, namely Birmingham – Amsterdam and Birmingham – Paris. The Commission also noted that entry of competitors into these routes would be difficult, considering that both Amsterdam Schiphol and Paris Charles de Gaulle airports are very congested airports. To address the competition concerns identified by the Commission with regard to the two routes, Connect Airways offered a set of commitments. Connect Airways committed to the release of five daily slot pairs at Amsterdam Schiphol airport and three daily slot pairs at Paris Charles de Gaulle airport. Under the proposed commitments, these slots will be released to competing airlines that want to fly the Birmingham – Amsterdam and Birmingham – Paris routes. These commitments fully address the competition concerns identified by the Commission regarding Connect Airways' acquisition of Flybe. The Commission therefore concluded that the proposed transaction, as modified by the final commitments, would no longer raise competition concerns. This decision is conditional upon full compliance with the commitments. The full press release is available online in EN, FR, DE. Mergers: Commission clears the acquisition of Worldpay by FIS

The European Commission has approved, under the EU Merger Regulation, the acquisition of Worldpay, Inc. by Fidelity National Information Services, Inc. ('FIS'), both of the US. Worldpay is a global provider of merchant acquiring and related payment technology services. FIS is a global provider of financial services technology with a focus on retail and institutional banking, payments, asset and wealth management, risk and compliance, and outsourcing solutions. The Commission concluded that the proposed acquisition would raise no competition concerns given, on the one hand, the limited horizontal overlap between the companies' activities and, on the other hand, the absence of anti-competitive vertical effects resulting from the combination of the activities of FIS and Worldpay. The transaction was examined under the normal merger review procedure. More information is available on the Commission's competition website, in the public case

Mergers: Commission clears the acquisition of SMM Auto Finance by Toyota Financial Services and the Mazda Motor Corporation

The European Commission has approved, under the EU Merger Regulation, the proposed acquisition of SMM Auto Finance ('SMMAF') by Toyota Financial Services ('TFS') and the Mazda Motor Corporation ('MMC'), all three of Japan. SMMAF provides motor vehicle finance services to consumers for Mazda motor vehicles bought in Japan. TFS offers a range of financial services, including auto sales financing, credit cards and insurance services, globally. It is owned by the Toyota Motor Corporation. MMC is globally active in the development, manufacture and marketing of motor vehicles and related spare parts and accessories. The Commission concluded that the proposed transaction would raise no competition concerns, as SMMAF is only active in Japan. The transaction was examined under the simplified merger review procedure. More information is available on the Commission's competition website, in the public case register under the case number M.9382. State aid: Commission approves €70 million public support to promote shift of freight traffic from road to rail in the Netherlands

The European Commission has approved under EU State aid rules a €70 million support scheme to encourage the shift of freight traffic from road to rail in the Netherlands. The scheme, which will run from 2019 to 2023, will be open to all railway companies operating in the Netherlands that have an access agreement with the Dutch rail infrastructure manager, ProRail. The support will take the form of compensation payments to railway companies to contribute to the cost of track access charges. The rail freight companies benefiting from the scheme are expected to pass on the benefits of the aid to their customers, i.e., freight shippers, through lower prices. The Commission found that the measure provides the right incentives for achieving a modal shift from road to rail. On this basis, the Commission concluded that the measure is compatible with EU State aid rules, in particular Article 93 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union regarding transport coordination and the Commission's Guidelines on State aid for railway undertakings. More information will be available under the case number SA.52898 in the State aid Register on the Commission's competition website once any confidentiality issues have been resolved. European pollutant register an important tool for EU in tackling industrial emissions

Image © Arif Miletli, Sustainably Yours /EEA

The EEA briefing 'A decade of industrial pollution data' shows how the register has enabled public access to environmental information since its creation in 2006. It also looks at how the E-PRTR web portal is used to track environmental policy implementation and outcomes and widen knowledge of industrial emissions in Europe. Data in the register shows that over the past 10 years emissions from industrial facilities to both air and water have decreased.

E-PRTR data is also used in studies to assess the effectiveness of environmental policies addressing industrial pollution, such as the EU Industrial Emissions Directive. For example, a recent EEA report 'Assessing the effectiveness of EU policy on large combustion plants in reducing air pollutant emissions' looked into the reasons for the observed emissions reductions tracked by the register. The study concluded that a significant part of the reductions for combustion activities took place due to requirements set out in EU environmental legislation on industrial pollution.

Finding pollution near you

The register has significantly facilitated public access to environmental information in Europe. Users of the register can zoom in on an area and see what pollutants are released from large industrial facilities. They can also find and identify top polluters from the data in the register or understand the environmental concerns around the various substances covered by the tool.

The register currently contains over 10 years of data, covering over 34 000 facilities across the 28 Member States of the EU, plus Iceland, Liechtenstein, Norway, Switzerland and Serbia. Data in the register shows for each facility and year, information concerning the amounts of pollutants released to air, water and land as well as off-site transfers of waste and of pollutants in wastewater. Data includes releases and transfers of 91 individual pollutants, like mercury, particulate matter and sulphur oxides, across 65 industrial activities – from cement or steel production to energy power plants.

Update of annual equity transparency calculations – application of the tick size regime for third-country shares

This update has among other things an impact on the average daily number of transactions on the most relevant market in the EU determining the tick size to be applied for trading on European markets. ESMA has very recently been made aware of an issue with the updated calculations which appears to affect the results for shares whose main pool of liquidity is in a third country while having less than one transaction a day on average on the most relevant market in the EU.

ESMA is investigating this issue and will revert in due course with a revised set of results for the relevant shares. In order not to impose a potentially incorrect tick size in the meantime, ESMA wishes to clarify that European trading venues are until further notice not bound by the tick sizes deriving from the ESMA publication of 21 June 2019 for third-country shares with an average daily number of transactions lower than one on the most relevant market in the EU. All those shares should be considered third-country shares for which the trading venue with the highest turnover is located in a country outside the EEA.

ESMA acknowledges that this change at short notice is not ideal, but believes this announcement avoids market disruption due to potentially incorrect tick sizes for third-country shares. ESMA will aim to quickly rectify the issue.

Central Asia: the European Union matches political commitment with further concrete support

To underpin the European Union's political commitment and kick-start the implementation of the new EU Central Asia Strategy, High Representative for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy/Vice-President of the European Commission, Federica Mogherini, at the EU-Central Asia Ministerial meeting in Bishkek, Kyrgyz Republic, today presented a set of EU funded regional programmes. These programmes will support the environment, climate action, sustainable consumption and production, energy, gender equality, counter-terrorism, and education.

Coming on top of over €1 billion of bilateral and regional assistance for the period 2014-2020, these programmes, worth €72 million, will benefit all countries of the region – Kazakhstan, the Kyrgyz Republic, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan and Afghanistan.

“The positive regional dynamics in Central Asia and a demand for closer cooperation with the European Union presents a significant opportunity for a closer, stronger partnership”, said High Representative/Vice-President, Federica Mogherini. “Our new Strategy for the region will enable us to cooperate more closely with the countries of Central Asia in tackling the challenges they face: from sustainable development to economic diversification, strengthening civil society and human rights to providing expertise and financial support for reform processes. We are ready to build on the enormous momentum gained over the last five years, as a consistent and reliable partner, to foster resilience, prosperity and regional cooperation.”

Commissioner for International Cooperation and Development

Neven Mimica added: “The EU's contribution worth €72 million boosts our strong partnership with Central Asia, for the benefit of our citizens. Together with national governments, civil society and the private sector we will work to create opportunities and shared prosperity, while protecting our planet for future generations.”

The new programmes announced today cover:

- Sustainable energy: The EU will invest €20 million in a new hydropower plant in Tajikistan, with additional support from Germany. This hydropower plant will create new opportunities for Tajikistan to meet increasing demand, and to export excess electricity to neighbouring countries, including to northern Afghanistan.
- Economic empowerment: The EU will invest €2 million in the economic empowerment of women in the region. This project will be implemented together with Kazakhstan and Uzbekistan. It will provide Afghan women with the skills they need to participate in the economic development of Afghanistan, and contribute to closer peaceful ties with Central Asia.
- Education: The EU also launched a new €36 million programme in support of the education sector in Kyrgyzstan. This financing agreement will support Kyrgyzstan’s education development strategy, in order to better formulate, implement and monitor education policy. It will help to improve resource allocation, ensure equitable access across gender, ethnicity and linguistic background, and enhance the synergy between skills and labour market needs.
- Inclusive sustainable growth: The EU has extended the activities of the SWITCH Asia Programme, with an amount of €14 million. The programme will support sustainable consumption and production and promote inclusive sustainable growth. It aims to reduce poverty and contribute to economic prosperity in Central Asia.
