

Recruitment for Young Astronaut Training Camp starts

The 11th Young Astronaut Training Camp is now seeking new recruits. From now until May 31, local secondary schools are invited to nominate students to join the camp. Selected participants will attend a series of astronaut training programmes in the Mainland free of charge this summer to learn about space science, astronomy and China's achievements in aerospace development.

The nine-day training camp will run from July 27 to August 4. Participants will visit major aerospace and astronomical facilities such as Beijing Aerospace City and the Jiuquan Satellite Launch Centre. This year, the participants could also visit the Five-hundred-meter Aperture Spherical Radio Telescope launched in 2016 in Guizhou to gain an in-depth understanding of its applications in astronomy and aerospace.

In addition to these visits, participants will be able to meet aerospace experts and astronauts, and attend lectures on space science and technology. They will also participate in astronaut training activities including the wearing of spacesuits, a "space kitchen", psychological training, escape and survival training, and blood-redistribution adaptability training. Upon completion of the courses they will sit for an assessment and be presented with certificates.

The quota for the training camp is 30. Candidates should be full-time students studying in Secondary 2 to Secondary 6 in the 2018/19 academic year, aged 12 or above, and be nominated by their respective schools. Each school can nominate no more than two students. There will be three rounds of selection including a quiz on astronomy and space science, a three-day pre-tour training camp and an interview. Candidates who achieve outstanding performance will be selected to join the camp.

The training camp is jointly presented by the Leisure and Cultural Services Department, the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce, the China Astronaut Research and Training Center and the Jiuquan Satellite Launch Center, in association with the Beijing-Hong Kong Academic Exchange Centre. The training camp is organised by the Hong Kong Space Museum and sponsored by the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce.

Kyoto Ichinoden opens first overseas restaurant in Hong Kong and looks to Mainland market for growth (with photo)

Kyoto Ichinoden announced today (May 1) that it has opened its first overseas restaurant in Hong Kong, celebrating the brand's 100th anniversary while also tapping into the city's unique role in the region and its close ties with the Mainland market for future expansion.

Kyoto Ichinoden's debut local restaurant is located in a major shopping mall in the heart of Tsim Sha Tsui, offering traditional Japanese cuisine including Kyoto kaiseki (multi-course dinner) and saikyozuke (seasonal meat or fish fillet pickled in Saikyo miso), the latter being a traditional dish from Kyoto.

The President of Kyoto Ichinoden HK Limited, Mr Jumpei Tanaka, said, "Hong Kong is a vibrant city situated in the heart of the region. Strategically, Hong Kong is our first choice for expansion because of its geographical and economic advantages. Moreover, there is a strong passion for Japanese food, so this gives Japanese restaurants a very good head start to set up a presence here. The city is also very strong in terms of logistics and transportation, ensuring efficient supplies of fresh ingredients – essential for the operation of high-grade Japanese restaurants like ours.

"We expect that soon we may reach out to the Mainland market and other places in east Asia from Hong Kong, given that the city is close to the Mainland market and a major business hub in Asia. As the Greater Bay Area (Guangdong-Hong Kong-Macao Greater Bay Area) has become an important development and that Hong Kong plays a key role within it, having a first overseas base in Hong Kong will also help our brand build solid customer confidence and spread quickly to the Greater Bay Area in the near future."

Associate Director-General of Investment Promotion, Dr Jimmy Chiang, said, "The arrival of Kyoto Ichinoden showcases the unique attractions of Hong Kong for international restaurateurs. It also adds to the vibrant scene of Hong Kong food industry, offering a premium choice for discerning diners from Hong Kong and around the globe. I wish Kyoto Ichinoden every success in Hong Kong and beyond."
