

Appeal for information on missing woman in Hung Hom (with photos)

Police today (November 22) appealed to the public for information on a woman who went missing in Hung Hom.

Chung Yee-lam, aged 55, went missing after she was last seen on To Kwa Wan Road yesterday (November 21) afternoon. Staff of a caring home made a report to Police on the same day.

She is about 1.6 metres tall, 50 kilograms in weight and of thin build. She has a pointed face with yellow complexion and short black hair. She was last seen wearing a purple jacket, black trousers and black shoes, and with a piece of gauze on the corner of her right eye.

Anyone who knows the whereabouts of the missing woman or may have seen her is urged to contact the Regional Missing Persons Unit of Kowloon West on 3661 8036 or 9020 6542, or email to rmpu-kw@police.gov.hk, or contact any police station.

Latest developments of regulation on disposable plastic products

The new regulation on disposable plastic products came into effect on April 22 this year, and the six-month adaptation period has been concluded for a month since October 21. After the adaptation period, the Environmental Protection Department (EPD) has continued its publicity and education efforts as the main focus, supplementing these efforts with enforcement actions to further promote a plastic-free culture in society.

A spokesman for the EPD said that the new regulation has been implemented for a month and that society as a whole has generally complied. It can be seen that a green and waste-less living culture has begun to develop in the societal level, and the trades have gradually adapted to the new regulatory requirements and made corresponding changes in their businesses. During the adaptation period, the EPD proactively arranged for staff to inspect more than 47 700 catering premises, retail stores, hotels and guesthouses in Hong Kong to provide various supports to the trades. Following the adaptation period, the EPD deployed staff over the past month to carry out inspections and follow up on the improvement progress at about 160 retail outlets that were non-compliant during the adaptation period. It was found that these outlets had all complied with the regulatory requirements. As for hotels and catering premises downstream, the EPD received 43 complaints about non-compliance over the past month, all of which have been investigated. While most of them have been rectified, two of them still had not taken specific actions to rectify at the time of follow-up inspections. The EPD has issued written warnings requiring the persons-in-charge to make improvements within 10 working days; otherwise, a fixed penalty notice will be issued.

The spokesman said, "After the adaptation period, the trades have actively complied with the new regulation by stopping the sale or provision of regulated disposable plastic products. The public's habit of using relevant products in their daily lives has also changed; for example, the number of takeaway customers who do not require disposable tableware has increased significantly compared to before the implementation of the new regulation, and they have gradually become accustomed to bringing their own reusable tableware. Also, more than 80 per cent of takeaway customers in chain restaurants no longer require disposable tableware. It is estimated that, on average, the new regulation can reduce more than 60 million sets of disposable tableware in Hong Kong every year, achieving an overall effective waste reduction goal. We are very grateful to the public and trades for their strong support and active participation. In addition, daily life for citizens and the trades has changed accordingly, with 'bring your own reusable tableware' and plastic-free cultures gradually spreading throughout society. This proves that the new regulation has achieved certain results.

"Hong Kong people have made unprecedented changes over the past six months to go plastic-free. However, legislation is merely one tool; our ultimate goal is to foster societal recognition and establish a plastic-free culture. Changing social customs and encouraging individuals to adopt new habits is no easy task. Solely relying on government initiatives will not suffice; we require collective support from society to succeed. The EPD appeals to all individuals, groups and organisations that support this goal to participate collaboratively and encourage others to change their lifestyles by starting with a move towards plastic-free. Together, we can promote a green and low-carbon living culture in Hong Kong and establish our

Hong Kong Customs on November 20 detected a suspected smuggling case involving a cross-boundary goods vehicle at the Lok Ma Chau Control Point and seized about 438 kilograms of suspected smuggled bird's nests with an estimated market value of about $32 million. This is the largest on record among bird's nests smuggling cases detected by Customs at land boundary control points in terms of the market value of the seizure.

Based on risk assessment, Customs on that day intercepted an outbound goods vehicle declared to contain game consoles at the Lok Ma Chau Control Point. Upon inspection, Customs officers found 12 pallets of goods inside the cargo compartment of the vehicle, and the batch of suspected smuggled bird's nests was seized from the bottom carton boxes on three of the pallets.

After an investigation, Customs arrested a 58-year-old male driver suspected to be connected with the case. He has been released on bail pending further investigation.

Customs will continue to combat cross-boundary smuggling activities with firm enforcement action based on risk assessment and intelligence analysis.

Smuggling is a serious offence. Under the Import and Export Ordinance, any person found guilty of importing or exporting unmanifested cargo is liable to a maximum fine of $2 million and imprisonment for seven years.

Members of the public may report any suspected smuggling activities to Customs' 24-hour hotline 182 8080 or its dedicated crime-reporting email account (crimereport@customs.gov.hk) or online form (eform.cefs.gov.hk/form/ced002).

Latest situation of Big Wave Bay Beach

Attention TV/radio announcers:

Please broadcast the following as soon as possible:

Here is an item of interest to swimmers.

The Leisure and Cultural Services Department announced today (November 22) that the Environmental Protection Department has classified the water quality at Big Wave Bay Beach in Southern District, Hong Kong Island, as Grade 2, which means the water quality has improved and the beach is suitable for swimming. However, due to big waves, the red flag has been hoisted at the beach. Beachgoers are advised not to swim at the beach.

The red flag was hoisted on the beach earlier on due to the water quality being classified as Grade 4 and unsuitable for swimming.
