

Royal Navy warship sails into Arctic Circle for High North operation

HMS Lancaster has completed three days of operations in the High North, marking the second time the Royal Navy has sailed into the Arctic Circle in two months.

Nation falls silent for Remembrance Sunday

The UK will fall silent today as the country marks the annual Remembrance Sunday Service .

Royal Marines train with cutting-edge autonomous technology in Cyprus

The UK's Littoral Strike Group has demonstrated the Royal Navy's readiness to defend against the most advanced and novel threats of today as part of their deployment to the Mediterranean.

Hundreds of the world's top minds debate ethics at Dstl's AI Fest

Dstl – the science inside UK defence and security – is playing a critical role in helping the UK MOD understand how it can responsibly and ethically adopt AI.

UK and France able to deploy a 10,000 strong joint military force in response to shared threats

This major milestone comes as the two countries commemorate the 10th anniversary of the Lancaster House defence and security, and nuclear treaties.