

Latest REACT-2 study findings show that almost all double vaccinated people in England have antibodies to coronavirus

New findings from the REACT-2 study, a major coronavirus antibody surveillance survey, have shown the impact of England's vaccination programme on antibodies in the population.

Trust celebrates first ever Gratitude Festival to thank staff

This week marks our first ever Gratitude Festival – a week-long celebration dedicated to thanking all our 14,000 staff.

Results from the Imperial vaccine trial suggest new Covid-19 vaccine technology is safe in humans

The first trial of a new Covid-19 vaccine technology has shown no short-term safety concerns.

Imperial College Healthcare appoints new chief operating officer

Claire Hook has been appointed to the reintroduced role of chief operating officer.

Three brain responses linked to successful weight loss surgery

Three types of brain responses which help to prevent weight regain following bariatric surgery have been identified for the first time in a new study.