UKIP congratulates President of the European Council Donald Tusk for proclaiming that "Europe is a 'cultural community' whose heritage must be preserved".

David Meacock, UKIP's new Culture and Arts spokesman said "We in UKIP have said for ages that not only should the UK limit migration because the unplanned-for a million net migrants every three years are overwhelming the UK's infrastructure and State services, but we also need to preserve the British way of life by for example everyone speaking and reading English. So, I'm very pleased that Mr Tusk seems to be beginning to see the light by also recognising 'the need to rebuild effective control of our [the EU's] external borders' – one reason why 17.4 million UK voters voted to leave the EU."
