

No further clarity today on the pay of millions of public sector workers as chaos at the top of Government continues- McDonnell

John McDonnell MP, Labour's Shadow Chancellor, speaking after his Urgent Question in the House today on the mixed messages coming from the government on public sector pay, said:

"Millions of public sector workers will have been left disappointed today after the Chancellor refused to make a statement to Parliament to clarify Government policy.

"Our dedicated public sector workers have suffered enough and deserve more than the empty words being offered to them by this weak and unstable cabinet of chaos.

"Today neither the Prime Minister, the Chancellor nor the Chief Secretary to the Treasury was able to tell us when a decision will be made about the future of the pay cap.

"The Chancellor should now formally inform the Pay Review Bodies that they are free to do what is right by the public servants and the services we depend upon by making a fair pay award. If they won't the Tories should stand aside for a Labour Government will give our public sector workers the pay rise they deserve and end austerity in the national interest."

Press release: UK field hospital in South Sudan fully operational

British troops are supporting the UN Mission in South Sudan (UNMISS) and Sir Michael Fallon has confirmed that the Bentiu-based medical facility is fully operational, and will support over 1,800 UN peacekeepers and UN staff. This will enable military and civilian staff to carry out the work of the UNMISS mission by providing vital infrastructure for a challenging operating environment.

Construction of the hospital came at the request of the UN, and was assessed as one of the best ways UK expertise could support delivery of the UNMISS mandate. The UNMISS role in South Sudan is to protect civilians, create the conditions conducive to the delivery of humanitarian aid, and support the peace process and Human Rights.

Following a commitment made in 2015 by the then Prime Minister to double the UK's commitment to global peacekeeping initiatives, nearly 400 UK military personnel are supporting UN efforts in South Sudan, making this one of the UK's largest operational deployments in the world.

The temporary hospital will be staffed by personnel from all three services, and will be replaced by a permanent field hospital built by Royal Engineers.

The British military contingent is also providing engineering support to the UN mission in both Bentiu and Malakal, including projects like the construction of a jetty on the River Nile, helicopter landing sites, and other infrastructure improvements.

Defence Secretary Sir Michael Fallon said:

The British-built temporary field hospital in South Sudan is now fully operational, and will support the UN's efforts protecting civilians and promoting stability in this conflict affected country.

UK troops have a proud record of delivering peace and security across the globe and are making an important contribution to a country where millions of people have been left starving and displaced.

This is one of our largest operational deployments, which clearly demonstrates Global Britain's continued commitment to United Nations peacekeeping and development and security in Africa.

The field hospital will be run by over 75 medical staff, including specialists in fields such as infectious diseases, intensive care and surgery.

Its facilities include:

- An emergency department
- A surgical theatre
- A laboratory
- An x-ray and head CT scanner
- An aero-medical evacuation team
- Wards including isolation facility

Commander Medical Lt Col Michael Hepburn said:

We are delighted to be able to declare the Hospital open. Our team feel honoured to be able to contribute to the United Nations Mission in South Sudan and hope that we can make a positive difference to enable our UNMISS partners to fulfil their UN roles.

In addition to engineering and medical support, the UK also has a small number of staff officers in the UNMISS' Juba headquarters.

Alongside the UK-hosted Peacekeeping Defence Ministerial meeting in London in September, these contributions underline the UK's leading role in support to peacekeeping operations. More widely, the UK government is committing funding and support to tackle the humanitarian crisis in South Sudan, with £100 million provided this year to provide food for over 500,000 people, safe drinking water for over 300,000 people, emergency health services for over 100,000 people and support for 650,000 people to build their livelihoods.

British military personnel and UNMISS representatives hosted an event to mark the opening of the hospital. Delegates included Commander Medical Lt Col Michael Hepburn, HM Ambassador Alison Blackburne, Head of the Department for International Development's South Sudan office Becks Buckingham, Head of Field Office Hiroko Hirahara, UNMISS Chief Medical Officer Dr Iqbal Mohd, Force Chief of Staff Brigadier Robbie Boyd OBE and Commander Operation TRENTON Lt Col Jason Ainley.

The Magic Money Tree branches out to Spinners and Advisors

Jon Trickett, Labour's Shadow Minister for the Cabinet Office, has written to the First Secretary of State and Minister for the Cabinet Office, Damien Green, asking why the Government has allowed a third of Special Advisers to be paid more than the Prime Minister's SpAd pay cap of £72,000, while limiting other public sector workers to 1 per cent.

It comes as No10 is set to appoint a new Director of Communications, a role which previously attracted a salary in excess of £100,000.

Jon Trickett said:

"This Government is happier spending money on spin doctors than real doctors. It's the same for nurses, firefighters and police who are trying to make ends meet.

"Theresa May had some nerve telling an underpaid nurse who'd seen a 14% real term cut in pay there was no "Magic Money Tree", only to find an extra billion pounds down the back of the settee for a grubby deal with the DUP to cling to power.

"It's a disgrace that a third of the Tories' spinners and advisers are being paid more than Theresa May's declared pay cap of £72,000 whilst hardworking public sector workers are limited to a miserly 1% pay increase. Even the Prime Minister's own joint Chiefs of Staff were paid £140,000 – almost double her declared cap. And now she's looking for a new Director of Communications, a role previously paid £125,000.

"The Prime Minister has ignored calls to lift the public sector pay cap. But it seems that like with David Cameron, some people can access the Magic Money Tree in the Downing Street garden as long as they have the right pass to get to it.

"The Government has forced pay restraint on public sector workers; but there is no such restraint inside Theresa May's Number 10."

Full text of letter to Damian Green:

*Dear
Damian Green,*

*Today
in Cabinet Office Oral Questions I asked you about Special Advisers' pay and the public sector pay cap. You failed to answer my question.*

*To recap, following the Government's refusal to lift the pay cap for thousands of nurses, police and firefighters, among many other public servants,
I am writing to enquire about the pay for Special Advisers to Secretaries of State.*

*When
Theresa May became Prime Minister she promised the pay of Special Advisers
would be capped at £72,000, unless authorised by her personally.
However, the Government's own figures from December 2016 showed that of the 83
Government
Special Advisers, 27 breached this limit. In fact, former advisers to the Prime Minister, her two Joint Chiefs of Staff, were both paid £140,000 a piece, 95%
more than the cap she promised.*

With much public interest in the issue, how much has the total expenditure of Special Advisers increased since May 2015?

There has also been significant attention paid to the value of severance payments awarded to Special Advisers when they leave. What is the total number of severance payments Government has paid out for advisers who have left Downing Street since June 2015?

Would you let us know, as First Secretary of State and Minister for the Cabinet Office, how many Special Advisers you now employ and if they breach the £72,000 pay cap set by the Prime Minister.

Finally, I now understand that No10 will soon appoint a new Director of Communications. The previous appointment was paid £125,000. Can you provide any assurance that salary will not rise any further?

Yours sincerely,

John Trickett.

Joint Letter of President Juncker and President Tusk to EU Heads of State or Government on the EU's Priorities for the G20

European Commission President Jean-Claude Juncker and European Council President Donald Tusk have today sent a joint letter to EU Heads of State or Government, setting out the EU priorities for the G20 Summit which takes place on 7-8 July in Hamburg, Germany. The two Presidents write, by way of introduction: "Europe's role in the world and our responsibility at the international level in these turbulent times are growing. More than ever the EU has become a global point of reference for all those who value the principles of liberal democracy and human rights, free and fair trade or concrete actions in facing global challenges, such as climate change, poverty, terrorism and illegal migration. A strong and determined Union is the best way to promote our values and interests, to support a rules-based multilateral system, and ultimately to protect and defend citizens. With this in mind we will participate in the G20 Summit in Hamburg later this week". In their letter, the two Presidents set out the EU's goals in 9 different areas: 1. The G20's key role in making the global economy work for all; 2. Bolstering an open and fair rules-based multilateral trading system; 3. Demonstrating that ambitious climate action is good for economic growth and jobs; 4. Tapping the potential of the digital revolution; 5. Advancing the global fight against tax avoidance and evasion; 6. Stepping up efforts to fight terrorism and terrorist financing; 7. Aiming for a more resilient international monetary and financial system; 8. Sharing responsibility for refugees and migrants; 9. Partnering with Africa for investment, growth and jobs. Presidents Juncker and Tusk will hold a joint press conference ahead of the G20 Summit, at 9.15 on Friday 7 July, in the G20 press centre in Hamburg. More information about the EU's participation in the G20 is available in this brochure. (For more information: Margaritis Schinas – Tel.: +32 229 60524; Mina Andreeva – Tel.: +32 229 91382)

Trade and Strategic Partnership agreements on the agenda of the EU-Japan Summit taking place in Brussels tomorrow

On Thursday 6 July, Brussels will play host to the 24th Summit between the European Union and Japan. The European Union will be represented by the President of the European Commission, Jean-Claude Juncker, and by the President of the European Council, Donald Tusk. Japan will be represented by Prime Minister Shinzō Abe. The Commissioner for Trade, Cecilia Malmström, will also participate, along with several Japanese Ministers. The EU-Japan Strategic Partnership Agreement and EU-Japan trade agreement will be the primary agenda points, with negotiations having progressed significantly over the past months and a political agreement between the leaders now within reach. The Summit will also provide an opportunity for the leaders to review and strengthen the EU-Japan relationship, including both bilateral issues, as well as regional and global challenges. Counter-terrorism, security, energy, data protection, climate action, migration and foreign policy priorities are all expected to be discussed. A joint press conference of the three leaders will take place in the Council at 12:10 tomorrow and will be shown live on EbS. A background briefing for journalists ahead of the Summit will take place at 14:30 this afternoon in the Council press room. Statement by First Vice-President Timmermans Statement by First Vice-President Timmermans on the final award made on 29 June by the Arbitration Tribunal of the Permanent Court of Arbitration in the arbitration between Croatia and Slovenia

Following yesterday's College meeting in Strasbourg, First Vice-President Timmermans issued the following statement: "The Commission held a discussion on the final award made on 29 June by the Arbitration Tribunal of the Permanent Court of Arbitration as regards maritime and land borders between Croatia and Slovenia. This is an issue that has been going on for more than 20 years. The Commission has always been supportive of the peaceful settlement of border disputes between Member States. In this particular process we have also acted as facilitator, leading to the establishment of the arbitration process in 2009. In this particular case, now that there is a decision, the Commission takes good note of the final award and expects both parties to implement it. In the same vein the Commission welcomes that both Prime Ministers of Slovenia and Croatia will meet on 12 July and have agreed that no unilateral steps would be taken before then. The Commission hopes that both Prime Ministers can come to an agreement on how best to implement the award. The Commission of course stands ready to contribute to or facilitate this process. Once we are on our way in this process the College will come back to the issue to discuss the progress and see how the Commission can help bring about a full implementation and just implementation of the award." EU releases additional aid as crisis in the Democratic Republic of Congo's Kasai province worsens

The European Commission has announced additional humanitarian aid of €5 million to help scores of people in urgent need of assistance in the Democratic Republic of Congo's conflict-torn provinces of Kasai. This will expand the EU's humanitarian response to eight Congolese provinces affected by conflict. This funding brings EU humanitarian assistance to the most vulnerable people in the Democratic Republic of Congo to almost €28 million euros since the beginning of the year. Over 1.3 million people are currently internally displaced, with some 35 000 new cases reported during May alone. Since the beginning of the year, an average of 8 000 people per day have been displaced. Commissioner for Humanitarian Aid and Crisis Management Christos Stylianides said: "The European Union is extremely concerned by the current humanitarian crisis in Kasai, causing horrible suffering to so many people. The funding we provide today will help for the very first time in this region our humanitarian partners to respond to the most urgent needs of those affected by the conflict. But ultimately, it is only by laying down arms and restoring peace that all those caught in this conflict will be able to return home and rebuild their lives". EU Response to Drugs: Commission proposes to restrict new synthetic opioid

Today, the European Commission has proposed to subject the new psychoactive substance furanylfentanyl to control measures across the European Union. According to the risk assessment report provided by the European Monitoring Centre for Drugs and Drug Addiction (EMCDDA), furanylfentanyl is a strong synthetic opioid which can cause severe harm to health. The substance is sold online in small and wholesale amounts as a "research chemical", typically as a powder and as ready-to-use nasal sprays. So far, furanylfentanyl has been detected in 16 Member States and is associated with 23 deaths, in addition to 11 acute non-fatal intoxications. Commissioner for Migration, Home Affairs and Citizenship Dimitris Avramopoulos said: "The rise in the availability of new psychoactive substances remains a considerable public health challenge in Europe. It is a rapidly evolving and extremely dangerous threat able to cause serious harm and even death. Our response needs to be equally quick and effective and that is why we have recently agreed on a new legislation on new psychoactive substances". The Commission's proposal will now be discussed by the Member States in the Council, which, in consultation with the European Parliament, will decide whether to adopt the measures. State aid: Commission approves prolongation of Polish bank guarantee scheme

The European Commission has authorised under EU state aid rules a prolongation of the Polish bank guarantee scheme until 30 November 2017. The scheme provides for State guarantees in favour of different types of solvent credit institutions in Poland. It was initially approved in September 2009 and prolonged several times, last time in December 2016. The Commission found the prolongation of the scheme to be in line with its guidelines on state aid to banks during the crisis because it is well targeted, proportionate and limited in time and scope. The Commission is authorising guarantee schemes on banks' liabilities for successive periods of up to six months in order to be able to monitor developments and adjust conditions accordingly. State aid: Commission approves prolongation of Irish credit union resolution scheme

The European Commission has found the prolongation of an Irish scheme for the orderly winding-up of credit unions to be in line with EU state aid rules, and in particular with the 2013 Banking Communication (see also MEMO). The objective of the scheme is to safeguard financial stability when a credit union becomes unable to meet regulatory requirements. It allows Ireland to provide aid for transferring the assets and liabilities of a failing credit union to an acquirer through a competitive process. This will help to achieve the maximum value for the assets and liabilities, ensuring that the aid is limited to the minimum necessary for an orderly winding-up and that no buyer gains an undue economic advantage through the acquisition of under-priced assets and liabilities. The scheme is valid until 30 November 2017. The Commission initially approved the scheme in December 2011. It was prolonged several times, the last time in December 2016. More information will be available on the Commission's competition website, in the public case register under the reference SA.48337. Mergers: Commission clears the creation of a joint venture between Cummins and Eaton Corporation

The European Commission has approved under the EU Merger Regulation the creation of a joint venture between Cummins of the United States, and Eaton Corporation of Ireland. The joint venture will develop and supply automated transmission systems for heavy-duty and medium-duty commercial vehicles. Cummins is active in the supply and servicing of engines and related products. Eaton is active in the supply of transmission systems for commercial vehicles, among other solutions for the management of electrical, hydraulic and mechanical power. The Commission concluded that the proposed transaction would not raise competition concerns, because the joint venture has no, or negligible, actual or foreseen activities in the EEA. The transaction was examined under the simplified merger review procedure. Commissioner Navracsics in Madrid for hearing at the Spanish Parliament

Commissioner for Education, Culture, Youth and Sport, Tibor Navracsics, is in Madrid today where he is contributing to the current debate in Spain on education reform. Discussing with a Parliamentary sub-committee, the Commissioner underlined the importance of education as a key driver of economic growth and social cohesion as only good, effective and inclusive education systems can help equip people with relevant skills and enable Member States to stay competitive in the global race. He highlighted how the Commission can help countries develop effective education policies and support them in their implementation with concrete tools and instruments, whilst respecting their sovereignty over their own education systems. Earlier this morning, Commissioner Navracsics met Spanish Minister for Education, Culture and Sport, Iñigo Méndez de Vigo, for a working breakfast, and he will visit later today the Spanish Congress and meet Chairwoman María Soraya Rodríguez Ramos. (For more information: Nathalie Vandystadt – Tel.: +32 229 67083; Inga Höglund – Tel.: +32 229 50698)
