

Beefing up cattle production in New Mexico

Scotland's Rural College is part of a new multi-million dollar research project investigating how to improve beef cattle production in the United States using precision farming methods.