

Branching out

Those who think forestry is all about felling simply can't see the wood for the trees. This is according to the person charged with revamping the subject at Scotland's Rural College.