

Breaking gender barrier

While there have been more female pilots in the aviation industry in recent decades, the fields of aviation mechanics and technical operations are traditionally male-dominated. But two young women – Cherry Ko and Chan Wing-lam – have embraced the challenge and joined the Government Flying Service as aircraft technicians.

News.gov.hk spoke with them to know more about their work and aspirations. The story appears on news.gov.hk today (August 24) in text and video format.
