

Call for armed forces community to contribute to the Frontline Project

News story

The Frontline, launched by StoryLab ARU, is a living digital archive collating the stories of health care practitioners and associated key workers during COVID-19.

The archive by StoryLab ARU will serve as a permanent record and testament to the lives, efforts, challenges, and achievements of health workers during the on-going pandemic.

The project is inviting all healthcare practitioners and associated key workers to share their experiences from the frontline with the archive, and they particularly would like to hear from members of the armed forces community. All contributions will be anonymised and your story or experience can take any form – videos, photos, audio reflections, text and artwork. You can contribute once or many times, this archive and your contribution to it will be of enormous cultural and historical significance.

Learn more about the project and contribute your story on the StoryLab ARU website.

You can also follow The Frontline project on social media via Twitter.

Published 6 August 2020