

Cattle population study could help reduce emissions

The most in-depth analysis of Scotland's beef cattle population ever carried out could help to reduce emissions and improve production.