

Charity trustees highly recommend their role to others, new research shows

Current trustees would highly recommend the role to others, in new research from the Charity Commission for England and Wales and Pro Bono Economics that offers optimism amid a national push to find new recruits.