

Corticosteroids may be an effective treatment for Covid-19 complications in children

An international study has shown that corticosteroids may be an effective treatment for children who develop a rare but serious condition after Covid-19 infection.