

Could groundwater provide the answer to future water resource challenges?

The British Geological Survey has shown that groundwater resources may have a significant role in securing future water resources under conditions of climate change.