

Crackdown on intimate image abuse as government strengthens online safety laws

Sharing intimate images without consent will be made a 'priority offence' under the Online Safety Act and social media firms will have to proactively remove and stop this material appearing on their platforms.