La Commissaire Crețu présente sa vision pour les futurs programmes de la politique de Cohésion

Ce matin la Commissaire à la politique régionale Corina Crețu a accueilli les journalistes participant à la Semaine européenne des régions et des villes 2018, aux côtés du Président du Comité des Régions Karl-Heinz Lambertz, et leur a présenté sa vision pour les futurs programmes de la politique de Cohésion. La Commissaire Crețu a dit : « Je suis fière de la proposition pour la nouvelle politique de Cohésion que nous avons présentée en mai, pour une politique plus moderne, flexible et simplifiée. Mais notre travail n'est pas fini. Pour que les investissements puissent effectivement commencer dès 2021, il faut dès maintenant penser aux prochains programmes. Aujourd'hui s'ouvre la Semaine européennes des régions et des villes ; c'est une bonne opportunité pour discuter du futur de la politique de Cohésion et c'est pourquoi je vais présenter mes suggestions pour aider les Etats-membres et les régions à préparer leurs programmes. » Le discours de la Commissaire est disponible en ligne, ainsi que la vidéo de la conférence de presse. Commission brings together religious leaders to discuss “The Future of Europe: addressing challenges through concrete actions”

European Commission First Vice-President Frans Timmermans hosted today a high-level meeting with eight representatives of religious organisations from across Europe. The participants debated “The Future of Europe: addressing challenges through concrete actions”. First Vice-President Frans Timmermans said: “Europe is home to people of many faiths, and every European has the right to practice his or her faith in peace and security. Ahead of next year's European elections, I reassured the participants in today's meeting that the European Commission will continue to stand up and speak up against any discrimination or attacks that their communities might face. Every European citizen will have a chance to shape our common future at the ballot box next year, and I invited the participants in today's meeting to engage actively in the political process and to encourage their communities to do so as well. While we may worship in different ways, our values are universal, including our commitment to democracy and equality.” Today's meeting builds on the high-level meeting with religious leaders of 7 November 2017 dedicated to the future of Europe and how to develop a values-based and effective Union. Today's meeting focused on the main policy challenges Europe faces in the next year, as well as the perspectives for the future, beyond the European Parliament elections. Participants discussed in particular how the EU is addressing migration, social integration and the sustainability of our way of life. (For more information: Tim McPhie – Tel.: +32 229 58602)

EU Battery Alliance: regions join forces to build a strong industrial value

chain in advanced materials for batteries

Today, in the context of the European Week of Cities and regions, Vice-President in charge of the Energy Union Maroš Šefčovič and Commissioner for Regional Policy Corina Crețu are participating to the launch of an interregional partnership on batteries. The European Battery Alliance is part of our Energy Union Strategy and aims at strengthening clean mobility, fight climate change and reduce dependencies deriving from energy imports. Led by Slovenia and gathering Auvergne-Rhône-Alpes and Nouvelle Aquitaine in France, Andalucía, Basque country and Castilla y León in Spain and Lombardy in Italy, this interregional partnership will receive tailored support from the Commission to develop and scale-up joint projects in advanced materials for batteries, under the smart specialisation pilot action for interregional innovation. Vice President Šefčovič said: “Regions are the living labs of our industrial policy. It is therefore excellent to see that the European Battery Alliance is now attracting those set to embrace this modernisation opportunity and join up with their strengths and capabilities. These interregional partnerships will play a crucial part in building a competitive, innovative and sustainable battery value chain in Europe, to capture a market that could grow to €250 billion annually by 2025 onwards. In the run to the first anniversary of the EU Battery Alliance next week, we will be showcasing that the EU has what it takes to become a global leader here.” Commissioner Crețu added: “I hope this new partnership inspire other regions to think about how they can make best use of the available EU support for reinforcing the European value chain for batteries in the years to come, include in the next generation of Cohesion Policy programmes, for the 2021-2027.” The pilot will run until the end of 2019 and the partnership will benefit from the support of special teams established within the Commission, involving experts from several thematic departments, but also from external experts on financial modelling, business plans or intellectual property. More information on the EU Battery Alliance and smart specialisation pilot actions for interregional innovation and industrial transition is available online. The Joint Research Centre launches new exhibition to highlight the science behind EU policy

The European Commission's Joint Research Centre is launching an exhibition called 'ARTEFACTS' on October 8th in the Berlin Museum für Naturkunde. The exhibition will use art to engage citizens in a discussion about EU policies and the scientific evidence behind them, demonstrating the value in our everyday lives. Tibor Navracsics, Commissioner for Education, Culture, Youth and Sport, responsible for the Joint Research Centre, said: “At a time when the role of expert knowledge and facts in decision-making is increasingly questioned, it is crucial to demonstrate to citizens that we carry out research in order to provide independent scientific advice to inform our work. This innovative exhibition enlists art to help people discover for themselves how EU policies based on evidence serve them in their everyday life and help us tackle the big challenges facing our societies.” The exhibition will take place at the Museum für Naturkunde in Berlin from 9 October 2018 until autumn 2019. A digital version of the exhibition will be available to download at the end of the month. For more information see here. Mergers: Commission clears the creation of a joint venture by Boeing and Adient for the production of aircraft seating

The European Commission has approved, under the EU Merger Regulation, the creation of a joint venture by Boeing and Adient, both of the US. The joint venture will design, develop, manufacture and sell seats for commercial aircraft. Boeing designs, manufactures and sells commercial aircraft and defence, space and security systems. Adient designs, manufactures and markets a full range of seating systems and components for passenger cars, commercial vehicles and light trucks. The Commission concluded that the proposed acquisition would raise no competition concerns. First, the overlaps between the companies' activities are limited: Boeing does not manufacture but only resells aircraft seats on a minority of its aircrafts, while Adient is not active in the production of aircraft seating. Second, the Commission found that despite Boeing's strong position in the manufacturing of large commercial aircraft, the transaction is unlikely to lead to competing aircraft seat suppliers being shut out from the market. The market in commercial aircraft seating is currently characterised by the presence of three large players and the transaction will lead to the creation of a new entrant in that market. The transaction was examined under the normal merger review procedure. More information is available on the Commission's competition website, in the public case register under the case number M.8960. STATEMENTS

Commissioners Miguel Arias Cañete and Carlos Moedas welcome the UN climate change report on 1.5° C global warming limit

The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) has today issued its Special Report on the impacts of global warming of 1.5 °C above pre-industrial levels and related global greenhouse gas emission pathways. The report provides policy-makers across the globe with a strong scientific basis for their efforts to modernise the economy, tackle climate change, promote sustainable development and eradicate poverty. The Commission welcomes the report by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change. It will provide a strong scientific basis for further climate change negotiations in Katowice, Poland in December. Commissioner Moedas and Commissioner Arias Cañete said: “The EU has been at the forefront of addressing the underlying root causes of climate change and strengthening a concerted global response to it in the framework of the Paris Agreement. Taking the valuable input from the Report into account, the Commission is working towards presenting in November a proposal for an EU strategy for long-term greenhouse gas emission reduction. It will be a comprehensive vision for the modernisation of our economy, our industries and our financial sector. The EU will work to reduce our greenhouse gas emissions in-line with the Paris Agreement's temperature goals, and to make our economy more modern, innovative, competitive and resilient." The EU will continue to work to address those challenges and expect others to follow. All parties must step up efforts from the pledges made under the Paris Agreement". Commission holds the 12th European Platform for Roma Inclusion dedicated to inequalities in housing and health

On 8 and 9 October, the European Platform for Roma Inclusion holds its 12th meeting in Brussels, around the theme of inequalities faced by Roma in the areas of health and housing. Commissioner Věra Jourová, Commissioner for Justice, Consumers and Gender Equality, will give an opening remarks on Monday evening and will join panel discussion on Tuesday. She said ahead of the event: “Improving health and housing access for Roma are preconditions for their full participation in society. I encourage all actors to address the prevailing issues, such as segregation and forced evictions and difficult access to quality health services.” The platform brings together national governments, European institutions, international organisations and Roma civil society representatives to enhance cooperation and the sharing of expertise on successful Roma inclusion. The Platform will start with an event celebrating Roma culture and its contribution to the European cultural heritage. Two parallel workshops devoted to Roma inequalities in the areas of health and housing will take place on 9th October, followed by two dialogues with the various stakeholders. The event is open to journalists upon registration and will be web streamed. All information is available here.

Vice-President Katainen and Commissioner Bieńkowska discuss developments in the collaborative economy

On 11 October, the European Commission is organising a high-level conference in Brussels to take stock of developments in the collaborative economy with representatives of consumers, trade unions, economic operators and public authorities. In 2016 the Commission provided guidance on how existing EU law applies to the collaborative economy. It has since complemented this “horizontal” guidance with specific work on short-term accommodation rentals, consumer rights, platforms as well as labour rights and social protection. The conference will be an opportunity to take stock of the economic development in the collaborative economy and its regulatory environment, and to report on the exchange of experiences and good practise with public authorities and stakeholders. In the run-up to the conference, today the Commission publishes a new Eurobarometer which confirms strong and growing consumer interest in the collaborative economy: almost a quarter of EU citizens use services offered by collaborative platforms in different sectors, such as accommodation or transport. While nearly 90% of respondents would recommend their use, wider policy concerns exist as regards the impact on local communities, consumer protection, employment issues and taxation.

Transport Commissioner Bulc visits Genoa to honour the memory of the victims of the Morandi bridge collapse and to assess opportunities to relaunch the area

Today, Commissioner for Transport, Violeta Bulc, visits the site of the Morandi bridge collapse in Genoa, Italy, to pay tribute to the victims of the tragedy. Violeta Bulc will meet the Italian Minister for Infrastructures and Transports, Mr Danilo Toninelli, and regional and local authorities to understand the needs and challenges of the area, and to assess all possibilities to help the development of the region. Commissioner Bulc says: “It is obviously up to the Italian authorities to establish responsibilities for such a horrible disaster and give the most adequate first replies to the most urgent needs. But we have to start looking ahead. And Europe is ready to do its part to help Genoa, and the whole area, regain a future and maintain its crucial role within the multimodal trans-European transport system”. The European Union is already an essential partner for the development of infrastructures in Liguria and in particular in the Genoa area. The EU intends to help the Italian authorities to explore the best use of all the European instruments at disposal to help relaunching the region, offered by the European Fund for Strategic Investments (EFSI), central pillar the Juncker Commission’s Investment Plan for Europe, the Connecting Europe Facility (CEF), the Invest EU programme and, where possible, the structural funds. Commissioners Hogan and Navracsics meet with Hungarian civil society to discuss ideas for making rural areas more vibrant, sustainable and attractive

Commissioner for Agriculture and Rural Development Phil Hogan and Commissioner for Education, Culture, Youth and Sport Tibor Navracsics are meeting today in Gödöllő (Hungary) with over 150 representatives of rural organisations, non-governmental organisations and academia to discuss the ways to enhance rural services – such as health, social services, education, energy, transport, retail – through modern technology to make rural areas more vibrant, sustainable and attractive. The event organised in the framework of the Citizens' Dialogue and the Smart Villages initiative will also be attended by Mr Károly Balázs Solymár, Hungarian Deputy Secretary of State responsible for information-communication, MEP Franc Bogovič and MEP Tibor Szanyi, Members of the European Parliament's Committee for Regional Development and Dr. Bálint Csatóri, Emeritus Researcher of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences. Smart Villages is the current sub-theme of the broader European Networks for Rural Development (ENRD) thematic work on 'Smart and Competitive Rural Areas'. The initiative explores ideas and initiatives around revitalising rural services through digital and social innovation and acts as a sounding board for developing practical orientations for using all the policy tools available to help Smart Villages emerge and develop. (For more information: Daniel Rosario – Tel.: +32 229 56185; Nathalie Vandystadt – Tel.: +32 229 67083; Kinga Malinowska – Tel: +32 229 51383; Joseph Waldstein – Tel.: +32 229 56184)

Commissioner Gabriel in Montenegro and Kosovo to promote Digital Agenda for Western Balkans

Mariya Gabriel, Commissioner for Digital Economy and Society is today in Podgorica, Montenegro, and will travel to Pristina, Kosovo, on 11-12 October to promote the Commission's strategy for a credible enlargement perspective through an enhanced support to the Western Balkan countries in the digital transformation of their economies and societies. Her visit to the region is an essential step for the swift implementation of the Digital Agenda for the Western Balkans launched on 25 June 2018, and follows the commitment taken by the leaders during the EU-Western Balkans Summit in Sofia, in May 2018. Today in Podgorica, the Commissioner will meet with Montenegrin Prime Minister Duško Marković to discuss a number of digital files, such as the reduction of roaming tariffs. She will also meet with Suzana Pribilović, Minister of Public Administration, to encourage the digitisation of the country's public services. In the afternoon, she will meet with Minister Pribilović and the Macedonian Minister of Information Society and Administration Damjan Manchevski, the Albanian Vice-President of Government Senida Mesi, and, the Kosovar Minister of Public Administration, Mahir Yagcilar. On Thursday, in Pristina, Commissioner Gabriel will start her visit with a meeting with Minister for Innovation, Besim Beqaj tbc and Minister for Economic Development, Valdrin Llluka, and representatives of the Kosovar private sector, including Telecom Operators, ICT businesses and startups and civil society associations. On Friday, the Commissioner will notably deliver a keynote speech on the potential of digitalisation as a driver for economic development at the International Conference "DigitalKS". (For more information: Nathalie Vandystadt – Tel.: +32 229 67083; Joseph Waldstein – Tel.: +32 229 56184)
