

Despite the headline fall in inflation, people throughout the country will be worse off yet again this month – Dowd

Dowd MP, Labour's Shadow Chief Secretary to the Treasury, commenting on today's inflation figures, said:

“Despite the headline fall in inflation, people throughout the country will be worse off yet again this month, as wages grow more slowly than prices. Real wages are still lower than they were when the Tories came to power in 2010.

“After seven years of Conservative failure on the economy, only a Labour government will tackle the scandal of falling living standards, beginning with a £10 per hour Real Living Wage and an end to the unfair public sector pay cap.”
