

Education Secretary says parents can see sex education material

Education Secretary's letters make crystal clear that schools must share relationships, sex and health education (RSHE) curriculum material with parents.