

Environment Agency urges farmers to start preparations for winter slurry storage

The Environment Agency is stepping up to support farmers facing slurry storage issues through another potentially difficult winter season.