

Environment Agency warns Thames users to stay safe on the river this summer

Rivers offer fun and relaxation but can contain hazards, especially around structures and after heavy rain.

Working together to prepare for climate shocks

Speech by Emma Howard Boyd, Chair of the Environment Agency, 8 June 2022, at the Flood & Coast Conference in Telford

Serious business: why our environment is the ultimate investment

Speech by Sir James Bevan, Chief Executive, Environment Agency, Association of British Insurers, 8 June 2022

New tool to drive restoration of historic native oyster reefs

A new tool to help increase the native oyster population around the English coast has been launched, the Environment Agency announced today.

Companies hit with fines after sewage kills thousands of fish

Third conviction for Anglian Water in 2022, with civil engineers also guilty over river pollution.