

Prey depletion threatens health of marine mammals

The link between reductions in the numbers and quality of fish and squid and the health of marine mammals that feed upon them in parts of northern European waters has been highlighted in a new report.

SRUC calls on dairy farmers to help with disease study

Farmers are being asked to help with a project researching the prevalence of an infectious condition in Scottish dairy herds.

Six Scottish farms collaborate to develop gluten-free oat supply chain

The market opportunity for gluten free oats drove six Aberdeenshire farmers to investigate a new supply chain that guarantees provenance, assurance and full traceability.

Eve enjoys more success

An SRUC Veterinary investigations officer is enjoying more success with her new company MI:RNA.

Four former SRUC students up for national award

Four former SRUC students – including one who now works for SAC Consulting – are among the finalists in this year's British Farming Awards.