President Juncker to attend presentation by Luc Van den Brande of his report on outreach to citizens

President Jean-Claude Juncker will attend the presentation of the report prepared by his Special Adviser, Luc Van den Brande, on outreach towards citizens on 6 November from 16:00 to 16:45 at the European Commission Visitors' Centre (Charlemagne – 170, Rue de la Loi). The report takes stock of the Commission's communication outreach and includes concrete communication guidelines and recommendations. It looks at synergies with other European and national actors around promoting dialogue with the public and sets out a framework for a more citizen-focused Europe. The report also looks at the role of communication technologies and highlights the importance of engaging with Europe's youth. It will contribute to the ongoing European debate triggered by the publication of the White Paper on the future of Europe as well as the recent State of the Union address by President Juncker. The report will be online as of 16:00 on 6 November. (For more information: Alexander Winterstein – Tel.: +32 229 93265)

EU supports rural electrification in Tanzania

During an official visit to Tanzania, Commissioner for International Cooperation and Development Neven Mimica signed a €50 million programme to support rural electrification in the country. The new financing agreement will support the access of Tanzanian citizens to affordable and sustainable energy through extending energy grids as well as expanding distribution networks. Commissioner Mimica said: "Our important programme worth €50 million will help accelerate the Tanzanian people's access to modern energy. It will provide electricity to over 3600 villages in rural regions of Tanzania, essentially benefitting 1 million people. And this access to energy is vital: it will increase the quality of life in rural areas, improve health and educational services and bring clear benefits, particularly to women and children." During visit to Tanzania, Commissioner Mimica met government representatives, international and national development partners, civil society and non-governmental organisations. Concentrations: la Commission autorise l'acquisition du contrôle conjoint de Groupe Pisto par CNP Assurances, Prédica et Macquarie

La Commission européenne a approuvé, en vertu du règlement européen sur les concentrations, l'acquisition du contrôle conjoint du Groupe Pisto, basé en France, par les sociétés françaises CNP Assurances et Prédica, et par la société australienne Macquarie. Groupe Pisto était précédemment contrôlé conjointement par Prédica et Macquarie. Groupe Pisto est actif dans la gestion d'installations de réception, de stockage et de transfert de produits pétroliers. CNP Assurances est active dans le secteur de l'assurance de personnes en France, notamment dans l'épargne-retraite et le risque prévoyance. Prédica fait partie du Groupe Crédit Agricole, qui fournit un large éventail de services bancaires et d'investissement. Macquarie fournit des services bancaires et financiers, ainsi que des services de conseil, d'investissement et de gestion de fonds. La Commission a conclu que la concentration envisagée ne soulèverait pas de problème de concurrence dans la mesure où les entreprises ne sont pas actives sur les mêmes marchés. L'opération a été examinée dans le cadre de la procédure simplifiée du contrôle des concentrations. De plus amples informations sont disponibles sur le site internet concurrence de la Commission, dans le registre public des affaires sous le numéro d'affaire M.8663. Mergers: Commission clears acquisition of Banque Internationale à Luxembourg by Legend Holdings Corporation

The European Commission has approved, under the EU Merger Regulation, the acquisition of Banque Internationale à Luxembourg (BIL) by Legend Holdings Corporation of China. BIL is a private banking group operating in retail, private and corporate banking, mainly active in Luxembourg. Legend Holdings is a diversified investment holding group listed on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange with a portfolio of strategic and financial investments. The Commission concluded that the proposed acquisition would raise no competition concerns because there are no horizontal overlaps or vertical relationships between the activities of the two companies. The transaction was examined under the simplified merger review procedure. More information is available on the Commission's competition website, in the public case register under the case number M.8643. European Commission present at the UN climate conference in Bonn

From 6 – 17 November, the 23rd Conference of the Parties to the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change (COP23) takes place in Bonn, Germany under the presidency of Fiji. It will bring together ministers and government officials, as well as a wide range of representatives from civil society and business. The European Union will be represented by Commissioner for Climate Action and Energy Miguel Arias Cañete and the Estonian Environment Minister Mr Siim Kiisler, as Estonia currently holds the presidency of the Council of the EU. Furthermore, Vice-President for Energy Union Maroš Šefčovic will attend the Climate Summit of local and regional leaders on 12 November, reiterating the EU's commitment within global initiatives of cities and local governments leading in the fight against climate change (for the launch of the Global Covenant of Mayors for Climate & Energy, of which he is the Co-Chair, see IP/16/2247). On 10 November, Commissioner for Environment, Maritime Affairs and Fisheries Karmenu Vella will speak at the EU Ocean Day on the need for a combined agenda of oceans and climate change (for the EU's Ocean and global actions strategy see IP/17/3603 and IP/16/3619) and on 11 November opens the Ocean Action Day under the Marrakech Partnership for Global Climate Action (GCA). During the conference, the EU will host more than 100 side events at the EU Pavilion in Bonn. These events, organised by a variety of countries and organisations from Europe and the rest of the world, will address a broad range of climate-related issues from the energy transition to the role of forests and oceans, climate finance, research and innovation and assessing climate risks. Parties to the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) and the Kyoto Protocol meet once a year at high level to discuss how to take international climate action forward and adopt decisions to implement commitments made. This year, Parties will discuss important elements of the historic Paris Agreement and putting its plans into action by 2020. For more information consult the website of the UNFCCC. High-level conference to boost investment in clean energy transition

Significant investment is needed in the energy sector to help the EU achieve its ambitious climate change targets, which were agreed as part of the Paris Agreement. The EU has committed to cut CO2 emissions by at least 40% by 2030 while modernising its economy and creating jobs and economic growth for all European citizens. The European Commission wants to keep the European Union competitive as the clean energy transition is changing the global energy markets. The Clean Energy for All Europeans package presented by the Commission in November 2016 aims at setting the legal framework to make this transformation possible. To boost investment in clean energy, the European Parliament and European Commission will host a high-level conference in Brussels on 7 November. Together with the European Parliament President

Tajani, ITRE Chair MEP Buzek, EIB President Hoyer and the Governor of California Jerry Brown, Commission Vice-President Katainen and Commissioner Arias Cañete will open the conference. Vice-President Šefčovic and Commissioners Oettinger and Bulc will also participate in high-level roundtables. Main focus: best ways to finance the transition from carbon to more sustainable energy sources. Estimates show that to reach the EU 2030 energy and climate targets, about €379 billion investments are needed annually over the 2021–2030 period, mostly in energy efficiency, renewable energy generation and infrastructure. Bringing together political leaders, policy makers, the investor community, energy market participants and other stakeholders, the conference will discuss how multiple stakeholders can act together, and how best to foster investment in the energy transition. See a detailed agenda of the event or follow live. At 10:45 a joint press conference with EP President Tajani, Californian Governor Jerry Brown and Climate Action and Energy Commissioner Arias Cañete is foreseen. Journalists that already hold a permanent media accreditation with the European Parliament will be able to access the event. European visionary research in focus: Vice-President Ansip participates in the Future and Emerging Technologies (FET) Flagships event in Brussels

Vice-President for the Digital Single Market Andrus Ansip will participate on Monday in an event on the progress and future of FET Flagships. The FET Flagships are large-scale research initiatives running over ten years with a total budget for each flagship of around €1 billion, bringing together partners from the scientific community and industry. Two flagships have been launched in 2013: one on Graphene, which aims at taking this carbon-based and ultra-thin 2D material with extraordinary properties from the laboratories to the market, with new products and applications; and the Human Brain Project, which aims at understanding the brain and creating synergies between neuroscience and computing. A third flagship on Quantum technologies was announced in 2016 and is about to start, building on the final report of the expert group on quantum that will be officially presented on Monday. Ahead of the event, Vice-President Ansip said: “Europe needs such ambitious projects to be at the forefront of science and technology, to bring new medical treatments, safer transport, cybersecurity and many more benefits to people. Stepping up investments in research and innovation is essential for the future of Europe.” Vice-President Ansip will speak at 11:00 CET, his speech will be published here. See also his recent blog post on quantum. One of the other highlights of the event is the keynote speech by Nobel Prize laureate, physicist Sir Konstantin Novoselov at 10:45 CET. Commission takes its innovation policy to Web Summit in Lisbon next week

Since the beginning of the mandate, the Juncker Commission has been working hard to give Europe's many innovative entrepreneurs every opportunity to become world leading companies. Against this backdrop, Commissioners Navracsics, Vestager, Moedas and King will participate in various activities at the Web Summit, one of the world's largest technology conferences taking place in Lisbon on 6-9 November. On Monday evening at 19.40, Commissioner Vestager gives an on-stage interview on "fair play and tech". On Tuesday morning, Commissioners Vestager and Moedas will join the European Commission #InvestEU stand at the summit and promote the EU Women Innovators Prize which is awarded to four outstanding women every year on 8 March. They will also participate in a Facebook Live chat on women investors at 9.00. Then at 10.20, Commissioner Moedas will award the €1 million iCapital – 2017 European Capital of Innovation Prize for which ten cities are shortlisted. At 11.30, Commissioner King will speak in a panel on creating a collaborative (cyber) security. In parallel Commissioner Vestager gives a speech on how the EU protects competition. At 13.30 Commissioner Navracsics will participate in the panel discussion "No one left behind: The skills your children need to know". On Wednesday morning at 10.45, Commissioner Moedas will give a keynote speech on costs and benefits of publicly funded research. During the Web Summit, Commissioners will have the opportunity to present and discuss the Commission's initiatives to support innovators, including the Juncker Plan, the "Start-up and Scale-up Initiative" and funding for market-oriented research and breakthrough innovation. Time schedule above is in local time. (For more information: Lucía Caudet – Tel.: +32 229 56182; Victoria von Hammerstein – Tel.: +32 229 55040; Joseph Waldstein – Tel.: +32 229 56184)

Commission Statement on the funeral of Daphne Caruana Galizia

Today, the world takes leave of Daphne Caruana Galizia.

We were all horrified by the fact that this well-known and respected Maltese journalist lost her life on 16 October in a criminal act of unspeakable brutality.

Daphne Caruana Galizia's career spanned over 30 years, she was a pioneer of investigative journalism in Malta. Her ability to trigger debate is a testament to the success of her reporting and her dedication to the pursuit of truth.

President Juncker and the European Commission condemned this brutal attack in the strongest terms possible. The right of a journalist to investigate, ask uncomfortable questions and report effectively, is at the heart of our values and needs to be guaranteed at all times.

Today, Malta will hold a national day of mourning to mark the funeral of Daphne Caruana Galizia. Our thoughts and hearts are with the people of Malta, and above all with Daphne Caruana Galizia's family, her colleagues and friends.

At the request of President Juncker, the flags at the Commission Headquarters in Brussels will fly half-mast in honour of Daphne Caruana Galizia and all those who have given their lives for the freedom of speech.

EU supports rural electrification in Tanzania

The new financing agreement will support the access of Tanzanian citizens to affordable and sustainable energy through extending energy grids as well as expanding distribution networks.

During the signing ceremony, Commissioner Mimica said: "Our important programme worth €50 million will help accelerate the Tanzanian people's access to modern energy. It will provide electricity to over 3600 villages in rural regions of Tanzania, essentially benefitting 1 million people. And this access to energy is vital: it will increase the quality of life in rural areas, improve health and educational services and bring clear benefits, particularly to women and children.”

During his visit to Tanzania, Commissioner Mimica met government representatives, international and national development partners, civil society and non-governmental organisations.

In his exchanges with the Tanzanian authorities and other local stakeholders, he will also discuss progress and challenges regarding the country's National Development Plan, as well as the cooperation between the EU and Tanzania in the fields of job creation, socio-economic development, sustainable agriculture and energy, rural roads, governance and human rights.

During his visit and his various meetings, Commissioner Mimica furthermore paid special attention to the important role of youth. Notably, he discussed this important topic when meeting civil society actors working to support children and youth, as well as young people. This comes ahead of the upcoming African Union – European Union Summit on 29 and 30 November which will be held under the overarching theme of “Investment in youth for accelerated inclusive growth and sustainable development”.

Background

EU support to the Republic of Tanzania focuses mainly on three sectors: good governance and development, energy and sustainable agriculture. Today's programme will be financed through the 11th European Development Fund (EDF), under which €626 million are allocated to Tanzania for the period 2014-2020.

More than one in four working-age adults in the EU remain economically inactive

Unemployment in the EU continues to fall, however more than one in four of the EU's working-age population are economically inactive; meaning they are not working and are either not seeking work or are not available for work. Furthermore, the vast majority of economically inactive people would like to work in some form. Eurofound's new publication Reactivate: Employment opportunities for economically inactive people looks in detail at what could be Europe's most important economic resource.

The number of economically inactive people has been steadily declining in the EU in recent years: in 2015 it stood at 27.5%, down significantly from 31.4% in 2002, and less than the pre-crisis figure of 29.7% in 2007. However, this substantial section of the population remains outside the labour market, and is not included in official employment statistics. While employment policy tends to focus primarily on the unemployed, there is scope for policies to focus more explicitly on the labour market integration of inactive people, and to harness their economic and social potential.

The new report examines groups within the inactive population that find it difficult to enter or re-enter the labour market and explores the reasons why. It also maps the characteristics and living conditions of these groups, discusses their interest in taking up employment and examines the barriers that prevent them from doing so. It finds that around four out of five inactive people would like to work at least some hours per week, depending on their financial needs, and approximately half would like to work 32 hours or more. The desire to work is particularly strong among students and homemakers.

The report also looks at strategies currently being implemented by Member States to promote the inclusion of those outside the labour market. It highlights that inactive people often face more than one barrier to employment, such as a low level of education coupled with care responsibilities, and stresses the importance of focusing on the specific needs of the inactive population.

Finally, the report underlines that Member States should fully implement the 2008 European Commission Recommendation on the active inclusion of people excluded from the labour market in the design and implementation of labour market integration strategies. In this regard, the European Pillar of Social Rights, which refers to inactivity as an issue in relation to inclusive education and lifelong learning, provides a unique and timely political impetus.
