Libye: deux millions d'euros d'aide humanitaire supplémentaires pour couvrir les besoins essentiels

Alors que de nombreuses personnes continuent de souffrir de la situation en Libye, la Commission européenne a annoncé aujourd'hui des aides humanitaires supplémentaires de l'ordre de deux millions d'euros afin de venir en aide aux plus nécessiteux. Ces aides permettront de couvrir les services de soins de santé d'urgence, la nourriture, le soutien aux moyens de subsistance et les services de protection. « L'UE est résolue à aider les plus vulnérables en Libye, victimes de conflits depuis plusieurs années. Ce financement supplémentaire aidera nos partenaires humanitaires à continuer de fournir une aide dans les zones difficiles d'accès. Il est essentiel que les parties en conflit respectent le droit humanitaire international et autorisent les travailleurs humanitaires à avoir pleinement accès à ceux qui sont dans le besoin et ainsi à sauver des vies, » a déclaré Christos Stylianides, commissaire en charge de l'aide humanitaire et de la gestion des crises. L'aide humanitaire de l'UE vise à permettre l'accès aux soins de santé de base pour les victimes de conflits, y compris les interventions chirurgicales d'urgence en contexte de guerre, la réhabilitation physique, la fourniture de médicaments essentiels ainsi qu'un soutien psychosocial. Cette assistance aide à rétablir les services de soins de santé de base dans les zones touchées par un conflit, ainsi qu'à permettre d'assurer l'éducation des enfants. Les fonds de l'UE feront l'objet d'une surveillance étroite et seront acheminés par l'intermédiaire d'organisations non gouvernementales internationales et du Comité international de la Croix-Rouge. TRADE: The EU and Norway agree on an interim appeal system in wake of the World Trade Organization Appellate Body blockage

The EU and Norway today notified to the World Trade Organization (WTO) their interim appeal arbitration arrangement. In this way, the EU and Norway secure an effective and binding dispute settlement for any potential trade disputes that might oppose them under the WTO law, in case the existing WTO Appellate Body stops being operational. The EU's foremost priority remains to ensure an effective functioning of the existing WTO Appellate Body. The interim arrangement has however become necessary as a contingency measure given the long-standing blockage in the appointments of the Appellate Body members. The EU and other WTO countries have made formal proposals and are now discussing ways to resolve the situation. In the meantime, an interim solution that mirrors the existing WTO appeal process can be put in place between interested WTO members. Today's agreement with Norway is the EU's second interim appeal arrangement, the first being the one agreed between the EU and Canada on 25 July 2019. State aid: Commission approves €64 million support for a waste-to-energy highly efficient cogeneration plant in Poland

The European Commission has approved, under EU State aid rules, Polish plans to support the construction of a highly efficient municipal waste treatment facility located in Gdańsk. The beneficiary of the aid is Port Czystej Energii Sp. z o.o. ("PCE"), a municipally owned company. The project will be organised in the form of a public-private partnership between PCE and private partners selected by the beneficiary through a competitive procedure. The Commission assessed the measure under EU State aid rules, in particular the Commission's 2014 Guidelines on State aid for environmental protection and energy. The Commission found that the aid will contribute to the EU's energy and environmental objectives without unduly distorting competition in the Single Market. In particular, cogeneration increases energy efficiency by recycling the heat from power generation for other uses (in this case, the public district heating), to the overall benefit of the environment. The new installation will also help reduce municipal waste disposal in landfills by incinerating approximately 160.000 tons of waste that is currently landfilled. It will contribute to reducing the use of fossil fuels and, hence, to reducing the level of CO₂ emissions. More information will be available on the Commission competition website in the public case register

MEIF 6 Fibre is an investment fund controlled by the Macquarie Group Limited of Australia. The Commission has concluded that the proposed acquisition would raise no competition concerns given the limited horizontal and vertical overlaps between the companies. Libya: €2 million in humanitarian assistance to cover basic needs

As many continue to suffer from the ongoing conflict in Libya, the European Commission has announced today €2 million in additional humanitarian aid to help those most in need. The assistance will cover emergency health care services, food, livelihood support and protection services.

“The EU is committed to supporting the most vulnerable in Libya who have now suffered years of conflict. This additional funding will help our humanitarian partners to continue to deliver aid in hard-to-reach areas. It is crucial that parties to the conflict respect International Humanitarian Law, and allow humanitarian workers full access to help those in need and save lives,” said Commissioner for Humanitarian Aid and Crisis Management, Christos Stylianides.

EU humanitarian aid supports access to essential healthcare for victims of the conflict, including emergency war surgery, physical rehabilitation, provision of essential medicines as well as prosthesis and psychosocial support. This assistance helps to restore primary healthcare services in conflict-affected areas, as well as providing education for children.

The EU funding will be closely monitored and channelled through international non-governmental organizations and the International Committee of the Red Cross.

Background

Since 2014, the European Union has allocated more than €46 million in humanitarian aid to respond to the most pressing needs in Libya. EU humanitarian funding amounted to €9 million in 2018 and €8 million in 2019. Humanitarian aid is part of the EU's broader support for Libya to address the ongoing crisis in the country. The EU has also allocated around € 367.7 million under the North of Africa window of the EU Emergency Trust Fund for Africa and bilateral assistance for protection and assistance of migrants, refugees and internally displaced people.

Through its partners, the EU also provides protection services, emergency food and other supplies to support conflict affected populations. We also provide education in emergencies to crisis-affected children. The EU provides aid to all vulnerable people, including forcibly displaced and vulnerable host populations, migrants, refugees and asylum seekers, regardless of their status and solely based on needs. The EU is providing assistance across all geographic areas in Libya, including in the Southern and Eastern part of the country.

Join EU-OSHA in marking the European Week for Safety and Health at Work 2019

Millions of workers across Europe frequently come into contact with dangerous substances in the workplace, and the use of such substances is increasing. This exposure can have negative effects on workers' health and their ability to work in the long term, so prevention is extremely important. Hundreds of events and activities organised to mark the European Week for Safety and Health at Work aim to raise awareness of this issue and encourage the exchange of best practice to ensure effective risk prevention.

Christa Sedlatschek, EU-OSHA's Executive Director, believes that it is essential that all European companies have access to the knowledge and resources they need to improve their risk management and highlights the pivotal role that the Healthy Workplaces Campaign has played in ensuring this: 'According to a Eurobarometer study, which surveyed almost 28,000 people in 28 countries, 65 % are worried about being exposed to hazardous chemicals. This is where EU-OSHA's dangerous substances e-tool can help. Free to use, it provides employers with the advice and support they need to effectively manage dangerous substances in the workplace.'

The interactive e-tool – specifically created for micro and small enterprises (MSEs) – helps businesses to do risk assessments on their use of dangerous substances and provides them with tailored advice on good practice and how to apply effective measures in the workplace. An impressive 26,000 visits have been recorded since the launch of the tool in May 2018, and it is tailored now to Iceland, Norway and Portugal. Country versions for other countries will follow later.

EU-OSHA works closely with its extensive network of partners to promote the European Week for Safety and Health at Work and ensure its success. The Agency thanks its national focal points, official campaign partners and media partners in particular for their support, which is key to the success of the European Week.

The national focal points have organised a wide variety of events throughout the week. National campaign closing events to review the highlights of the campaign, exchange good practice and reflect on lessons learned are held in Austria, Lithuania, Italy and Slovakia.

In Spain, a conference in Barcelona focuses on minimising exposure to carcinogens, while a workshop in Madrid highlights the importance of a strong risk prevention culture in managing hazardous substances. And a conference in Finland discusses the safe handling of chemical agents in the workplace and offers practical advice to participants.

What's more, campaign partners, media partners and committed supporters hold many smaller events across Europe all with the same aim – to reduce the risks from dangerous substances in Europe's workplaces.
