

FS begins visit in Beijing (with photos)

The Financial Secretary, Mr Paul Chan, began his visit in Beijing this afternoon (July 11).

In the afternoon, Mr Chan visited an enterprise focusing on autonomous driving technologies, and exchanged views with its management on the latest developments of the industry.

In the evening, he attended a dinner with a group of Hong Kong university students participating in an exchange programme as interns in financial institutions in Beijing to learn about their work, studies and life.

When chatting with the students, Mr Chan pointed out that as the country is energetically constructing a new development pattern of "dual circulation", pushing for a high standard two-way opening up and embracing high-quality development, Hong Kong can make unique and important contributions as an international financial centre.

Mr Chan encouraged the students to make use of their valuable internship opportunity to gain an in-depth understanding of the needs, operation and development of the country's financial market, as well as development opportunities related to working on the Mainland, so as to accumulate experience and build a network for future career planning.
