

Government has refused to take the side of the average pension saver – Alex Cunningham

Alex Cunningham MP, Shadow Pensions Minister, commenting on the Written Ministerial Statement on pension charges, said:

“Once again the Government has refused to take the side of the average pension saver.”

“It cannot be right that expensive costs and charges are being applied to meagre pension pots – we need these charges to go lower.”

“What we see instead is a Government in chaos, kicking important decisions into the long grass.”

“Only Labour will create a more efficient, transparent and sustainable pension system for the many, not just a wealthy few.”
