

Government reminds persons of targeted groups about requirements for free testing at community testing centres

The Food and Health Bureau (FHB) announced on May 15 that apart from free COVID-19 testing service provided for persons required to undergo testing as mandated by compulsory testing notices, the Government will also continue to provide free COVID-19 testing service at community testing centres (CTCs) for persons of targeted groups who have yet to complete a COVID-19 vaccination course or are unfit for vaccination because of health reasons.

A spokesman for the FHB reminded today (May 18) that starting next Monday (May 24), construction site personnel and working staff accompanying and receiving local group tours are required to present medical certificate or vaccination record to staff of the CTCs for free testing service. They should get the documents ready as soon as possible if they will continue to undergo regular testing. Those without the required documents will need to pay for the testing service. The Government does not preclude extending this requirement to other targeted groups later.

Currently, persons of targeted groups who have not completed vaccination are generally required to undergo regular testing within 14 or seven days before work, and the specific requirements (including testing frequency, specimen requirement, etc.) are set out at Annex. In view of the protection brought by the vaccination, the relevant staff member will no longer need to undergo regular testing upon his or her completion of vaccination.

The spokesman reiterated that the two vaccines currently recognised in Hong Kong are safe and effective, and have been received by tens of millions of people worldwide. Getting vaccinated can protect oneself and those around, and is the best way to fight the virus. Most people are fit for vaccination. Currently, all Hong Kong residents aged 16 or above are eligible for receiving free vaccination. The Government calls on the public to treasure the vaccine supply in Hong Kong and get vaccinated as soon as possible.
