

HAD clarifies rumours

In response to rumours circulating on mobile instant messaging applications, claiming that officials from home affairs will visit the public with official letters to verify the validity of their personal identification documents in preparation for the upcoming election, a Home Affairs Department spokesperson today (July 26) clarified that the claims are totally unfounded and appealed to the public to stay vigilant.