

How 'natural enemies' can be farmers' friends

With evidence mounting that insect populations are declining, farmers are being encouraged to act now to save these vitally important species.