

Incident Management

News story

Effective incident management is critical to mitigating the impact of incidents at your organisation, site or premises and ensuring a swift and effective recovery

Well planned and rehearsed incident management practices and measures can save lives, minimise harm and reduce the overall impact of a terrorist attack on or in the near vicinity of your premises. Having a thorough and tested incident management plan is also something you can promote to deter potential hostiles from targeting your site

The Centre for the Protection of the National Infrastructure [CPNI] have have produced a number of guidance documents to assist organisations with their planning. They focus on building relationships and key outputs in place as soon as an incident occurs and highlight the immediate actions an organisation's command and control may take during an attack with the primary objective to save lives.
