

It is crucial that the criminal justice system works in the interests of all victims – Carolyn Harris to the Victims' Commissioner's review into the treatment of child victims of sexual and violent offences, Labour's shadow home office minister, Carolyn Harris, said:

Responding

"It is crucial that the criminal justice system works in the interests of all victims.

"But it is clear from this review that young victims of some of the most serious offences feel they are still being let down.

"Rather than trying to downplay the findings, the Government should accept there is a problem and get on with producing the Victims' Law they promised to address it."