

Jabs offer opportunities

The Community Vaccination Centre operated by the University of Hong Kong Li Ka Shing Faculty of Medicine not only administers COVID-19 vaccines but also offers an invaluable opportunity to boost scientific research in the community and gives university students a hands-on learning experience.

News.gov.hk spoke to the university's School of Public Health to learn about its research projects and student volunteers at the vaccination centre.

The story is available at www.news.gov.hk/eng/feature today (August 15) in text and video format.