

Lake study aims to improve water quality

A study to understand options available to improve recreational use and boost water quality and wildlife at a popular Northumberland lake has started.