

Levelling up push sees more than 5,000 public buildings plugged into high-speed broadband

More than 5,000 public buildings – including schools, hospitals and libraries – have been connected to high-speed broadband thanks to a UK Government scheme to level up public services.