GAZA: Islamic Jihad militants on Sunday agreed terms of an Egyptian-brokered truce with Israel, intended to end three days of intense conflict that has left at least 43 Palestinians dead.

The deal raises hopes of an imminent cessation of the worst fighting in Gaza since an 11-day war last year devastated the impoverished Palestinian coastal territory.

"A short while ago the wording of the Egyptian truce agreement was reached," senior Islamic Jihad member Mohammad Al-Hindi said in a statement.

KHARTOUM: Sudan's Foreign Ministry on Saturday condemned the killing of 18 Sudanese people during an attack by an armed group from Chad, state media reported.

The killings took place on Thursday when Sudanese herders from West Darfur state were ambushed while following the trails of camels looted by the Chadians the day before, according to Sudan's ruling Sovereign Council. On Saturday, Sudan's acting Foreign Minister Ali Al-Sadiq conveyed his country's "protest and condemnation of the incident," in a meeting with Chad's ambassador to Khartoum.

Cargo ship bound for Lebanon brings hope, not solution to food crisis

BEIRUT: A ship bringing corn to Lebanon's northern port of Tripoli normally would not cause a stir. But it's getting attention because of where it came from: Ukraine's Black Sea port of Odesa.

The Razoni, loaded with more than 26,000 tons of corn for chicken feed, is emerging from the edges of a Russian war that has threatened food supplies in countries like Lebanon, which has the world's highest rate of food inflation – a staggering 122 percent – and depends on the Black Sea region for nearly all of its wheat.
