

New European research to reduce and reuse CO2 in industrial processes

Researchers across Europe have come together to accelerate the development of technologies to reduce carbon dioxide (CO₂) emissions. Over the next 3 years, a large project will focus on the removal of CO₂ from industrial processes, the conversion of CO₂ to create valuable products, such as methanol, and the safe storage of CO₂ deep underground.