

New legislation to support precision breeding and boost Britain's food security

The Government has announced new laws to support precision breeding technology which will increase food production, reduce costs to farmers and allow drought and disease resistant crops to be grown.