

New records detail how AI helps government make quick, accurate decisions to boost trade, speed up responses and more

New records reveal how algorithmic tools are being used in public services to enhance citizen support, enable quick and accurate decision-making, and drive technological improvements in critical government services.