

New research into expansion of life-saving HIV testing programme

A new research project has been announced to evaluate an expansion of the hugely successful HIV opt-out testing programme to new sites across England.