

New research shows Scottish public supports investments to restore peatlands

New research has found that the general public is supportive of ambitious plans by the Scottish Government to restore Scotland's peatlands – which benefits water quality, wildlife and carbon storage.