

New research using hydrogen aims to take the carbon out of heating

The British Geological Survey (BGS) will lead the recently funded ELEGANCY research project that will support the decarbonisation of heating using novel hydrogen-based technology. This project is one of five supported by the UK Department for Business, Energy and Industrial Strategy (BEIS) with co-funding from the EU.