

New social housing reforms to crack down on rule breakers

Those who commit anti-social behaviour to face a ban of up to five years. People with closest connections to the UK and their local areas to be favoured.