

News story: Forestry Commission lifts Phytophthora pluvialis restrictions on timber industry

Plant health requirements lifted following research which showed that risk of the disease spreading via timber material is low