The healthcare sector in the Middle East is changing fast. It is responding to rapidly growing demands for preventive care, and for effective ways to reduce lifestyle-related diseases and ensure a longer, healthier life for citizens.

The sector is moving towards specialist, more personalised healthcare with much greater interaction and self-management enabled by the ever-growing digital technology.

The extraordinary and unique combination of the UK's National Health Service's (NHS) huge data assets, its world-leading centres of clinical excellence and the UK's vibrant tech sector is producing some of the most innovative, evidence-based digital health solutions in the world today, in areas such as artificial intelligence, the internet of things, virtual and augmented reality as well as big data analytics.

Focus on prevention, quality and innovation

At Arab Health 2018 in Dubai (29 January – 1 February 2018) Healthcare UK showcased how the best of British healthcare provides exactly what healthcare leaders in the Middle East are looking for. The focus was on prevention, quality and innovation, with exceptional applications in the field of digital healthcare. Four outstanding UK digital healthcare companies were on display:

The UK delegation was led by Lord O'Shaughnessy, Parliamentary Under Secretary of State at the Department of Health and Social Care.

Lord O'Shaughnessy said:

The NHS's unparalleled collection of data enables the development of innovative solutions based on real-world scenarios and evidence. Combining that vast data set with clinical excellence (we have 3 of the top 4 medical schools worldwide) and outstanding technology companies means that the UK is at the cutting edge of healthcare innovation and technology.

High level of commercial interest generated

The combination of 4 outstanding UK companies presenting from an attractive, interactive and eye-catching set, a busy programme of supporting seminars and a package of other engagement activity was very effective in generating a high level of commercial interest. A major contract between babylon and the Saudi Ministry of Health was signed on the event stand, and a number of other contract discussions are proceeding well.
