

News story: New research on the long-term health of 2 groups of older veterans

Researchers from King's College London, University of Oxford and Lancaster University are planning new research investigating whether past exposure to small doses of chemical warfare agents impact long-term health.