News story: Ransomware advice

The NCSC has provided guidance for enterprise administrators and small businesses who want to reduce the likelihood of being held to ransom by WannaCry (or other types of ransomware).

1. Ransomware: 'WannaCry' guidance for Enterprise Administrators

NCSC site contains guidance for enterprise administrators who want to reduce the likelihood of being held to ransom by WannaCry (or other types of ransomware). There is more general advice and guidance on protecting enterprise IT on the NCSC's guidance site.

Guidance aimed at larger businesses

2. Ransomware: 'WannaCry' guidance for Home Users and Small Businesses

Guidance for home users or small businesses who want to reduce the likelihood of being held to ransom by WannaCry (or other types of ransomware).

This page contains guidance for home users or small businesses who want to reduce the likelihood of being held to ransom by WannaCry (or other types of ransomware).

Guidance for Home Users and Small Businesses

There is more general advice and guidance on protecting yourself online at CyberAware.